Dear Output Team,

While reading through the job description on builtinla.com, my curiosity peaked. Even if there's no knock on my door, I'm pretty sure that the job posting has just earned you guys a new customer. I'm lovin' your plugin suite! The Analog Strings Expansion is killer, Arcade Patterns are sick but my favorite plugin so far is the Substance Bass Engine; now that's some sub, wow! #wantwantwant!

Aside from a love for music production, my programming skill set acutely matches your job description. I've been programming for close to 10 years and have been developing Rails apps and APIs for a solid 6 years. As a team lead at my current job Forcefield Inc., we made the decision to add Reactjs Native to our suite of applications to be able to support Android devices in addition to iOS. It's been a blast to work with Redux's strict data down, unidirectional flow pattern; so many pain points eliminated!

Currently, I've become enamored by the power of Elixir and the Erlang OTP. I love the warm waters of Ruby, but the functional programming world with its exponential concurrency and fault tolerance improvements have me locked in its BEAM. Plus, the budding community is helping to redefine the possibilities of distributed software. Here are two of my favorite conference talks: Collaborative Music with Elm and Phoenix - Josh Adams and Mat Trudel: Recreating The "Amen Break" with Elixir

Before becoming a programmer, I worked in the music industry in many capacities. Starting with an internship at CRC, a few years later, I worked with Curtis Jones (Cajmere/Green Velvet) as his tour manager, label employee at Cajual/Relief Records and session guitarist/bassist. After that, I opened a record store with two friends in Chicago called Wax Addict Records. Those were fun times!
